MISS NEW YORK—This is a large wavy petaled, strikingly handsome flower. It has been said that if there is such a quality as distinctive style in a dahlia, this variety possesses it. It is a deep rose showing rosolane purple on the reverse of the artistically twisted tips of petals.

This Hybred-Cactus was a popular favorite at the New York Show of the American Dahlia Society in 1924, and received very favorable comment in the December issue of Garden Magazine.

It may be classed as one of the finest of the giant Hybred Cactus Exhibition Dahlias. The flowers are held on healthy plants $3\frac{1}{2}$ to 5 ft. in height, and hold tight centers throughout the season.
